

Merry Christmas!

Hello!

I hope you are having a lovely Christmas time, surrounded by family and friends.

I am sorry it's taken so long to write newsletter 7, it's been a busy few months juggling different projects!

Christmas Interiors.

There is nothing nicer than seeing houses all trimmed up for Christmas, both inside and outside!

All warm and cosy, with sparkling Christmas lights and decorations, there is something comforting about it.

Christmas Interiors.

Christmas interiors come in a wide range of colours and themes, whether you favour the traditional reds, golds and greens or crisp white and silver decorations.
There is so much to choose from! and all equally beautiful!

Here is a celebration of some gorgeous Christmas rooms.
I couldn't resist!

Sustainability.

As promised in the last newsletter, sustainable window dressings!

With everyone struggling with the cost of living at the moment, every penny counts and it is especially true with what you have up to your windows....

Thin, unlined curtains and blinds are a waste of time and money as they are allowing draughts in through your windows, particularly in old houses with single glazing, and the same with doors.

Interlined curtains and Roman blinds act as additional insulation and can actually save you heat and money!

The thick layer of interlining coupled with quality sateen lining act as a barrier to the cold and help with sun damage, that fades your curtains.

Giving you curtains that last a lifetime.

Another way to sustainably dress your windows is to upgrade rather than throw away!

If your main curtain or blind fabric is in relatively decent condition, they can be salvaged!

With a little love and care, new linings and tapes can be added, seams and hems altered to hide sun damage and they will look like new.

Before & after

The images opposite show damaged curtains, with marks and stains on the main fabric and linings. All upgraded with marks gone!

New linings, pinch pleats, hand sewn hems and side seams with added weights .

Recent makes!

Sorry I'm a bit behind with this!

As usual thank you so much for spending the time to look at my little newsletter and thank you to all my lovely customers who supported Wick Cottage this year!

Please check your email next week for a year - end round up or down load straight from the website!

Much love,
Ber X
